NEW QUESTION: 1

Refer to the exhibit. EIGRP is configured with the default configuration on all routers. Autosummarization is enabled on routers R2 and R3, but it is disabled on router R1. Which two EIGRP routes will be seen in the routing table of router R3? (Choose two.)

- A. 172.16.0.0/16
- B. 10.10.10.0/24
- C. 172.16.10.0/24
- D. 10.10.0.0/16
- E. 10.0.0.0/8
- F. 172.16.0.0/24

Answer: A,B

Explanation:

Explanation/Reference:

Explanation

EIGRP performs an auto-summarization each time it crosses a border between two different major networks. In this case all different networks are in different major networks so EIGRP will perform auto- summarization when it exits an interface. But R1 has been configured with no auto-summary command so EIGRP will not summarize on S0 interface of R1. So the routing table of R2 will have the network 10.10.10.0/24 (not be summarized).

When exiting S1 interface of R2, EIGRP summarizes network 172.16.10.0/24 into the major 172.16.0.0/16 network but it does not summarize network 10.10.10.0/24 because it is not directly connected with this network. Therefore in the routing table of R3 there will have:

+ Network 10.10.10.0/24 ( not summarized)

+ Network 172.16.0.0/16 (summarized)

-&gt; C and D are correct.

Note: I simulated this question on GNS3, you can see the final outputs of the show ip route commands on these routers (I connected these routers via FastEthernet, not Serial interfaces so the outputs are slightly different but the main points are not changed).

NEW QUESTION: 3

You plan to migrate an Oracle database that supports an online transaction processing (OLTP) workload to your Database Machine.

Following are details for the source database: Database version: 10.2.0

Byte order: Big Endian HP-UX (64-bit)

Database size: 24 TB

Storage: ASM with 1 MB allocation unit size

Which two are supported migration methods?

A. Local migration using Oracle Streams

B. Physical migration using Transportable Database

C. Logical migration using logical standby

D. Physical migration using ASM online Migration

E. Logical migration using Oracle Streams

Answer: B,E

Explanation:

Note:

* physical migration techniques (e.g. Data Guard Physical Standby, Transportable Database, Transportable Tablespaces(B), Rapid Clone) vs. logical migration techniques(C)(e.g. Oracle Data Pump).

*You can use either Data Pump export/import or original export/import for Streams instantiations.

*The Oracle Exadata Database Machine runs the standard Oracle Database. Therefore, any application that runs with the Oracle Database today can be seamlessly migrated to the Exadata Database Machine with no changes to the application.

*There are several techniques for migrating data to a Database Machine. Migration can be done using Oracle Recovery Manager (RMAN) to backup from traditional storage and restore the data onto Exadata. Oracle Data Guard can also be used to facilitate a migration. This is done by first creating a standby database based on Exadata storage. The standby can be using Exadata storage and the production database can be on traditional storage. By executing a fast switchover, taking just seconds, you can transform the standby database into the production database. This provides a built-in safety net as you can undo the migration very gracefully if unforeseen issues arise. Transportable Tablespaces(B) and Data Pump may also be used to migrate to Exadata. Any technique used to move data between Oracle Databases can be used with Exadata.
