Explanation:

Do I need to issue the PROTECT STGPOOL command if I replicate all nodes in a directory-container storage pool?

It is highly recommended that you issue the PROTECT STGPOOL command regardless of the current replication strategy in place. The PROTECT STGPOOL command is a storage level protection mechanism and allows for the repair of damaged extents without any interaction with the inventory. If the PROTECT STGPOOL is issued before the REPLICATE NODE command completes, the replication process completes faster. This is an added benefit as the primary goal is to protect the storage in case of local damage scenario.
