Studio. The first step is to create a workspace. This is done by clicking on the "Workspace" button in the top right corner of the Studio interface. Once the workspace is created, you can create a compute target. This is done by clicking on the "Compute Target" button in the top right corner of the Studio interface. Once the compute target is created, you can create a training job. This is done by clicking on the "Training Job" button in the top right corner of the Studio interface. Once the training job is created, you can monitor the progress of the training job. This is done by clicking on the "Monitor" button in the top right corner of the Studio interface.

Synthetic Minority Oversampling

Technique (SMOTE) is used to generate synthetic samples for the minority class. This is done by selecting a random sample from the minority class and a random sample from the majority class. A new synthetic sample is then generated by interpolating between the two selected samples. This process is repeated until the desired number of synthetic samples is generated. The synthetic samples are then added to the training set. This helps to balance the training set and improve the performance of the model.
