NEW QUESTION: 2

What is the concept of segregating information or processes, within the same system or application, for security reasons?

- A. Cellblocking
- B. fencing
- C. Sandboxing
- D. Pooling

Answer: C

Explanation:

Sandboxing involves segregating and isolating information or processes from others within the same system or application, typically for security concerns. This is generally used for data isolation (for example, keeping different communities and populations of users isolated from other similar data).

NEW QUESTION: 3

What metadata is stored on a DataNode when a block is written to it?

- A. Information on the file's location in HDFS.
- B. Node location of each block belonging to the same namespace.
- C. Checksums for the data in the block, as a separate file.
- D. None. Only the block itself is written.

Answer: B

Explanation:

Each DataNode keeps a small amount of metadata allowing it to identify the cluster it participates in. If this metadata is lost, then the DataNode cannot participate in an HDFS instance and the data blocks it stores cannot be reached.

When an HDFS instance is formatted, the NameNode generates a unique namespace id for the instance. When DataNodes first connect to the NameNode, they bind to this namespace id and establish a unique "storage id" that identifies that particular DataNode in the HDFS instance. This data as well as information about what version of Hadoop was used to create the block files, is stored in a file named VERSION in the `dfs.data.dir/current` directory.

Note: Administrators of HDFS clusters understand that the HDFS metadata is some of the most precious bits they have. While you might have hundreds of terabytes of information stored in HDFS, the NameNode's metadata is the key that allows this information, spread across several million "blocks" to be reassembled into coherent, ordered files.

Which monitoring function should be enabled on the MAG Series device?

- A. SNMP logging
- B. Syslog server logging
- C. Event logging
- D. Admin logging

Answer: A
