NEW QUESTION: 1 You have a web application (app.mycompany.com) running on an EC2 instance with a single elastic network interface in a subnet in a VPC. Because of a network redesign, you need to move the web application to a different subnet in the same Availability Zone. Which of the following migration strategies meets the requirements? A. Launch a new instance in the subnet via an AMI created from the instance, and redirect new connections to this new instance using DNS. Decommission the old instance. B. Make an API call to change the subnet association of the elastic network interface. C. Create an elastic network interface in the new subnet. Attach this interface to the instance, and detach the old interface. D. Change the IP addresses manually to another subnet within the server operating system. Answer: A Explanation: Instances cannot change subnets, so a new instance must be created (Response B). A is wrong because you cannot remove the original elastic network interface. C is not possible. D is wrong because the OS has no ability to affect the AWS assigned IP addresses.

NEW QUESTION: 2 You manage a software development project that includes multiple feature teams. The teams integrate their code into a shared code repository as frequently as possible. You plan to configure a build definition by using the default build process template (DefaultTemplate.xaml). You need to know when a check-in from a feature team has broken the build or caused a test to fail, without impacting the feature team. What should you do? A. Set the build trigger to Continuous Integration and enable automated testing. B. Add the Builds check-in policy to your team project. C. Set the Analyze Test Impact parameter to True in the build process template. D. Create a shelve command for pending changes. Queue a build using the latest source with the shelve parameter. Answer: A
