NEW QUESTION: 2

Which two statements about Infrastructure ACLs on Cisco IOS software are true? (Choose two.)

A. Infrastructure ACLs are used to block-permit the transit traffic.

B. Infrastructure ACLs are used to block-permit the traffic in the router forwarding path.

C. Infrastructure ACLs only protect device physical management interface.

D. Infrastructure ACLs are used to block-permit the traffic handled by the route processor.

Answer: C,D

Explanation:

Limit Network Access with Access Control Lists Devised to prevent unauthorized direct communication to network devices, infrastructure ACLs are one of the most critical security control mechanisms that can be implemented in the network. An ACL is constructed and applied to specify necessary connections between hosts or networks and network devices. Common examples of these types of connections are eBGP, SSH, and SNMP. After the required connections have been permitted, all other traffic to the infrastructure is explicitly denied. All transit traffic that crosses the network and is not destined to infrastructure devices is explicitly permitted.
