Deployment package. A deployment package is like any other package in SCCM, except that it contains only the software update binary files. The client downloads only the required updates. As a result, deployment packages can contain a mix of updates from multiple OSs. In SCCM 2012 SP1, a client can fall back to Windows Update if the requested update isn't available in a deployment package. You should create a new deployment package twice a year. Service windows can be used if the VM was created from a Service Template.. It doesn't state this so I would say A is correct
