NEW QUESTION: 1What attack floods networks with broadcast traffic so that the network is congested?A. TeardropB. Brute forceC. SpoofingD. SMURFAnswer: D*Explanation:SMURF attack -- This attack floods networks with broadcast traffic so that the network is congested. The perpetrator sends a large number of spoofed ICMP (Internet Control Message Protocol) echo requests to broadcast addresses hoping packets will be sent to the spoofed addresses. You need to understand the OSI model and how protocols are transferred between layer 3 and layer 2 to understand this attack. The layer 2 will respond to the ICMP echo request with an ICMP echo reply each time, multiplying the traffic by the number of hosts involved. Engineers should turn off broadcast capability (if possible in your environment) to deter this kind of attack.

NEW QUESTION: 2

6to4 addresses are assigned to the interface of a Cisco IOS router. The router is configured with the following commands:
