Answer:

Explanation:

Topic 4, Fabrikam Inc.

Background

Fabrikam, Inc. is a worldwide leader in production and sales of cameras, lenses, flashes, and photography accessories. The company employs 6,500 people worldwide.

The company has its main office in Tokyo; three data centers in Tokyo, New York, and Prague; ten manufacturing units across China; and branch offices in 20 other cities. The network diagram for Fabrikam, Inc. is shown in the exhibit. (Click the Exhibit button.)

For the pilot project, a Front End Server and an Edge Server will be located at the New York data center. Test users will be located in the Tokyo main office and outside the Fabrikam network over a public Internet connection. The company plans to replace the existing traditional non-standard analog Private Branch Exchange (PBX) implementations with a modern collaboration and telephony solution. This modernization should allow employees to collaborate efficiently and reduce the company's phone bills at the same time.

A proposal was made to accomplish this by testing and implementing a Microsoft Lync 2013 infrastructure.

For cost effectiveness, the company wants to utilize the existing network infrastructure when implementing the Lync 2013 infrastructure.

The company needs to make sure the existing network infrastructure is ready for Lync 2013 implementation by analyzing:

Wide area network (WAN) infrastructure, Wi-Fi infrastructure, and Quality of Service (QoS) approaches.

During analysis, rogue access points (APs) were detected, so management wants to secure the Fabrikam, Inc. wireless network infrastructure.

The company wants to design and implement a wireless local area network controller (WLC) to minimize operational complexity and support.

During the test phase of implementation, Lync Phone Edition device users are experiencing voice degradation when they use audio with other Lync users, There are no reports of any problems between Lync phone communications.

Upper management is very concerned about ensuring security over a public network. The recommended solution should use secured protocols such as Transport Layer Security (TLS), Mutual Transport Layer Security (MTLS), or secure real-time transport protocol (SRTP).

Existing Environment

The company's existing environment includes:

a domain controller, a Microsoft Exchange 2013 infrastructure server, and a Microsoft SharePoint 2013 server.

The existing analog PBX telephony has reached its capacity in most locations.

Currently the company has a mix of Multiprotocol Label Switching (MPLS) Layer-3 network and Internet Protocol security (IPSec) using an Asymmetric Digital Subscriber Line (ADSL) between their locations, a remote VPN network for remote/on-field employees, and Wi-Fi point-to-point links between buildings within the same locations, as well as internal Wi-Fi access points. QoS is enabled globally for all WAN and LAN connections. Corporate firewalls are installed at all locations.

At the Fabrikam, Inc. main office, there are three wireless access points (WAPs) deployed with no Remote Authentication Dial-In User Service (RADIUS)/AAA. All of them are configured for channels 2 or 7 with the same Service Set Identifier (SSID) and Wi-Fi Protected Access-Pre-Shared Key (WPA-PSK). Users at the main office use wireless infrastructure, and as users roam they do not switch over to different WAPs but stay associated with the original WAP until the signal is completely gone. Then the wireless signal associates with the closest WAP.

For Lync Phone edition devices, QoS is set to its default. The company's network platforms support only four queues with QoS-based admission.

The company uses traffic shaping and traffic policing.

Business Requirements

Employees travel between sites and require stable and reliable collaboration and phone solutions. The company wants to reduce investment in telecommunications, overseas calling, roaming, and conference call charges. Branches should be able to support up to 24 simultaneous peer-to-peer (P2P) calls between sites. Employees should be able to call any phone number at any time, be visible, and be able to chat and use audio conferencing. The company plans to deploy wireless LAN controllers (WLCs) for wireless management and monitoring, and wants to deploy Wireless IP phones in the main office. The company wants to map the Differentiated Services Code Point (DSCP) markings to industry best practices for all media types.

The proposed solution:

- must operate effectively for the entire company, including all locations and remote users,
- must be reliable and recoverable in case of network or other problems affecting any site,
- should offer rapid deployment,
- should be scalable, and
- should consolidate chat, phone, and email.

Technical Requirements

All Session Initiation Protocol (SIP) signaling and media traffic must be encrypted. The company wants integrated security within phones and servers, and Wi-Fi secured communications for WPA/WPA2. The new system should be highly available and should remain fully functional if any one server fails.

The proposed solution must be compatible with most known video and audio device manufacturers. The audio codec bandwidth is shown in the following table:

Fabrikam uses RTAudio Wideband. Call Admission Control (CAC) is disabled for VPN users. The company's existing network supports MPLS, IPSec VPN, and Remote VPN networks. WAP Infrastructure and WLC placement must be cost effective, with capacity management allowing high availability. QoS is currently deployed with non-standard setting for DSCP marking on the TCP/IP packets. Voice over IP (VoIP) requires service guarantees regardless of network conditions.
