NEW QUESTION: 2

Sourcefire IPS, a feature that allows you to create a whitelist of IP addresses that are exempt from being blocked by a blacklist. When you create a whitelist, you are creating a list of IP addresses that are exempt from being blocked by a blacklist. This is useful when you have a large number of IP addresses that are exempt from being blocked, such as those used by your organization's internal network or those used by a partner organization. In this scenario, you want to create a whitelist for the IP addresses of the source firewalls that are exempt from being blocked by the blacklist.

- A. Create a whitelist for the IP addresses of the source firewalls that are exempt from being blocked by the blacklist.
- B. Create a blacklist for the IP addresses of the source firewalls that are exempt from being blocked by the blacklist.
- C. Create a whitelist for the IP addresses of the destination firewalls that are exempt from being blocked by the blacklist.
- D. Create a blacklist for the IP addresses of the destination firewalls that are exempt from being blocked by the blacklist.
- E. Create a whitelist for the IP addresses of the destination firewalls that are exempt from being blocked by the blacklist.

Answer: C

Explanation:

Using Security Intelligence Whitelists

In addition to a blacklist, each access control policy has an associated whitelist, which you can also populate with Security Intelligence objects. A policy's whitelist overrides its blacklist. That is, the system evaluates traffic with a whitelisted source or destination IP address using access control rules, even if the IP address is also blacklisted. In general, use the whitelist if a blacklist is still useful, but is too broad in scope and incorrectly blocks traffic that you want to inspect.
