B. Local security policy
C. System configuration
D. Boot.ini file
Answer: B

NEW QUESTION: 3
Your network contains an Active Directory forest named contoso.com. The forest contains a single domain. All domain controllers run Windows Server 2012.
The domain contains two domain controllers. The domain controllers are configured as shown in the following table.

Active Directory Recycle Bin is enabled.
You discover that a support technician accidentally removed 100 users from an Active Directory group named Group1 an hour ago.
You need to restore the membership of Group1.
What should you do?
A. Perform tombstone reanimation.

B. Modify the is Deleted attribute of Group1.
C. Apply a virtual machine snapshot to VM1.
D. Export and import data by using Dsamain.
Answer: A
Explanation:
Active Directory provides a mechanism for restoring a tombstone back into a normal object. This is effectively an undelete function for deleted objects. The function is a specially formed LDAP modify operation that must include two specific attribute modifications: it must remove the isDeleted attribute (not just set it to FALSE) and it must move the object to another container by changing the object's distinguishedName. The new distinguishedName typically (but not necessarily) uses the lastKnownParent attribute as the container and keeps the same RDN minus the \0ADEL:<objectGUID> component that Active Directory added when it created the tombstone.
Note:
*When deleting an object, Active Directory will not actually delete that object immediately (in most cases) but rather it will keep it for a period of time as a tombstone object. This means it will remove some of its attributes, add the isDeleted=True attribute, and place the object in the Deleted Object container.
*Tombstone reanimation (which has nothing to do with zombies) provides the only way to recover deleted objects without taking a DC offline, and it's the only way to recover a deleted object's identity information, such as its objectGUID and objectSid attributes. It neatly solves the problem of recreating a deleted user or group and having to fix up all the old access control list (ACL) references, which contain the objectSid of the deleted object. Just keep in mind that tombstone reanimation does have its own limitations, which I will discuss, so you'll still want to keep authoritative restores in your box of tricks.
*Restoring an object in Active Directory Recycle Bin to Restore A Deleted Object
In the management console, go to Tools > Active Directory Administrative Center Click the Deleted Objects folder Search the list of deleted objects for the object that needs to be restored. Right-click the selected object and select Restore from the shortcut menu.
