Explanation:

You can run a script to return a list of all accounts that haven't been used for a number of days, for example 30 days. If an account hasn't been logged into for 30 days, it's a safe bet that the user the account belonged to is no longer with the company. You can then disable all the accounts that the script returns. A disabled account cannot be used to log in to a system. This is a good security measure. As soon as an employee leaves the company, the employees account should always be disabled.

NEW QUESTION: 4

A company that operates a web application on premises is preparing to launch a newer version of the application on AWS.

The company needs to route requests to either the AWS-hosted or the on-premises-hosted application based on the URL query string. The company wants to use an Application Load Balancer (ALB) for this launch.

Which solution meets these requirements?

- A. Use two ALBs: one for on premises and one for the AWS resource. Add hosts to the target group of each ALB. Create a software router on an EC2 instance based on the URL query string.
- B. Use one ALB with two AWS Auto Scaling groups: one for the AWS resource and one for on premises. Add hosts to each Auto Scaling group. Route with Amazon Route 53 based on the URL query string.
- C. Use one ALB with two target groups: one for the AWS resource and one for on premises. Add hosts to each target group of the ALB. Configure listener rules based on the URL query string.
