NEW QUESTION: 1
Which type of EIGRP route entry describes a feasible successor?
A. a primary route, stored in the topology table
B. a primary route, stored in the routing table
C. a backup route, stored in the routing table
D. a backup route, stored in the topology table
Answer: D
Explanation:

Feasible Successors
A destination entry is moved from the topology table to the routing table when there is a feasible successor. All minimum cost paths to the destination form a set. From this set, the neighbors that have an advertised metric less than the current routing table metric are considered feasible successors. Feasible successors are viewed by a router as neighbors that are downstream with respect to the destination.
These neighbors and the associated metrics are placed in the forwarding table.
When a neighbor changes the metric it has been advertising or a topology change occurs in the network, the set of feasible successors may have to be re-evaluated. However, this is not categorized as a route recomputation.

Feasible successor is a route whose Advertised Distance (AD) is less than the Feasible
Distance (FD) of the current best path. A feasible successor is a backup route, which is not stored in the routing table but, stored in the topology table.

NEW QUESTION: 2
The main corporate website has a service level agreement that requires availability 100% of the time, even in the case of a disaster. Which of the following would be required to meet this demand?
A. Warm site implementation for the datacenter
B. Localized clustering of the datacenter
C. Geographically disparate site redundant datacenter
D. Cold site implementation for the datacenter
Answer: C
Explanation:
Data backups, redundant systems, and disaster recovery plans all support availability. AN in this case a geographically disparate site redundant datacenter represents 100% availability regardless of whether a disaster event occurs.
