NEW QUESTION: 1

Which of the following choices describe a Challenge-response tokens generation?

- A. The authentication mechanism in the workstation or system does not determine if the owner should be authenticated.
- B. A workstation or system that generates a random login id that the user enters when prompted along with the proper PIN.
- C. A workstation or system that generates a random challenge string that the user enters into the token when prompted along with the proper PIN.
- D. A special hardware device that is used to generate random text in a cryptography system.

Answer: C

Explanation:

Explanation/Reference:

Challenge-response tokens are:

- A workstation or system generates a random challenge string and the owner enters the string into the token along with the proper PIN.

- The token generates a response that is then entered into the workstation or system.

- The authentication mechanism in the workstation or system then determines if the owner should be authenticated.
