NEW QUESTION: 1

As part of a VDC design, you configured a number of hypervisor clusters that require a nonroutable network to accommodate data transfers for online VM migrations and cluster heartbeats. However, some of the clusters contain sensitive data that should not be accessible by hypervisors in any other cluster.

The design recommends using Private VLANs to isolate each cluster's private network traffic.

The network administrator has created a Primary VLAN, and asks you how the Private VLANs should be configured. How should you instruct the network administrator to proceed?

- A. Configure a Community Private VLAN for each cluster.
- B. Configure an Isolated Private VLAN for each cluster.
- C. Configure an Isolated Private VLAN for each cluster, and configure the gateway port in the Primary VLAN.
- D. Configure a Community Private VLAN for each cluster, and configure the gateway port in the Primary VLAN.
