NEW QUESTION: 3

You are asked to Implement the disaster recovery (DR) and business continuity requirements for Oracle Cloud Infrastructure (OCI) Block Volumes. Two OCI regions being used: a primary/source region and a DR/destination region.

The requirements are:

- * There should be a copy of data in the destination region to use If a region-wide disaster occurs in the source region
- * Minimize costs

Which of the following design will help you meet these requirements?

- A. Back up block volumes. Use Object Storage lifecycle management to automatically move backup objects to Archive Storage. Copy Archive Storage buckets from source region to destination at regular Intervals.
- B. Clone block volumes. Use Object Storage lifecycle management to automatically move clone object Archive Storage. Copy Archive Storage buckets from source region to destination at regular intervals.
- C. Back up block volumes. Copy block volume backups from source region to destination region at regular intervals.
- D. Clone block volumes. Copy block volume clones from source region to destination region at regular intervals.

Answer: C

Explanation:

Explanation

You can copy block volume backups between regions using the Console, command line interface (CLI), SDKs, or REST APIs. For steps, see Copying a Volume Backup Between Regions. This capability enhances the following scenarios:

Disaster recovery and business continuity: By copying block volume backups to another region at regular intervals, it makes it easier for you to rebuild applications and data in the destination region if a region-wide disaster occurs in the source region.

Migration and expansion: You can easily migrate and expand your applications to another region.

You can also enable scheduled cross-region automated backups with user defined policies, To copy volume backups between regions, you must have permission to read and copy volume backups in the source region, and permission to create volume backups in the destination region.
