NEW QUESTION: 1

In reviewing the Auto-Scaling events for your application you notice that your application is scaling up and down multiple times in the same hour. What design choice could you make to optimize for costs while preserving elasticity?

Choose 2 options from the choices given below

- A. Modify the Auto Scaling group termination policy to terminate the newest instance first.
- B. Modify the Amazon CloudWatch alarm period that triggers your Auto Scaling scale down policy.
- C. Modify the Auto Scaling Group cool down timers
- D. Modify the Auto Scaling policy to use scheduled scaling actions

Answer: B,C

Explanation:

Explanation

The Auto Scaling cooldown period is a configurable setting for your Auto Scaling group that helps to ensure that Auto Scaling doesn't launch or terminate additional instances before the previous scaling activity takes effect. After the Auto Scaling group dynamically scales using a simple scaling policy. Auto Scaling waits for the cooldown period to complete before resuming scaling activities. When you manually scale your Auto Scaling group, the default is not to wait for the cooldown period, but you can override the default and honor the cooldown period. Note that if an instance becomes unhealthy.

Auto Scaling does not wait for the cooldown period to complete before replacing the unhealthy instance.

You might need to change the location where WSUS stores updates locally. This might be required if the disk becomes full and there is no longer any room for new updates. You might also have to do this if the disk where updates are stored fails and the replacement disk uses a new drive letter.

You accomplish this move with the movecontent command of WSUSutil.exe, a command-line tool that is copied to the file system of the WSUS server during WSUS Setup. By default, Setup copies WSUSutil.exe to the following location:

WSUSInstallationDrive:\Program Files\Microsoft Windows Server Update Services\Tools\
