- A. Static Application Security Testing(SAST)
- B. Threat Modelling
- C. Dynamic Application Security Testing(DAST)
- D. Static Application Security Testing(SAST)

Answer: A

Explanation:

Static application security testing(SAST) is generally considered a white-box test, where the application test performs an analysis of the application source code, byte code, and binaries without executing the application code. SAST is used to determine coding errors and omissions that are indicative of security vulnerabilities. SAST is often used as a test method while the tool is under development(early in the development lifecycle).

SAST can be used to find XSS errors, SQL injection, buffer overflows, unhandled error conditions, and potential backdoors.
